The color, Rose Bengal technically, is a unique art blending of old rose, red, nauve and ripe strawberry shades; and deserving of its own special spot in the garden.

CHRYSANTHEMUM CULTURE

A few do's and don'ts: Plant in well prepared soil that has had a coat of manure the previous fall or winter if you have it, or an application of commercial fertilizer worked into the soil 10 days before planting. Side dress with any fertilizer about July 10th, again when buds appear just before a rain. Keep well cultivated, pinch out top when 6 or 8 inches high, again after the side branches have made good growth. Not after July 20th it might be too late for buds to set. Don't plant too near a building or tall trees. Give them room enough to develop and produce the blooms you expect. By all means dig up your old clump each Spring, divide using the new shoots, destroy the old core. You will be rewarded for your labor.

From Beaumont, Texas

Dear Sir,

In regards to the Mums I must say that this is the first time that I have received plants as far away as Magnolia, N. J. to Beaumont, Texas, and not even have a wilted leaf among the plants for in the past we have expected to lose one in every five plants. I will not hesitate to recommend your plants both for size and the care that is taken in packing them for shipment. And I should know as I have experimented for the past 6 years with plants and getting them shipped from almost every state in the United States. R.E.G.
